DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary.

Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Compton et al (US Pregrant Pub 2003/0059471)

Compton et al teaches making flakes which contain drugs (abstract). The flakes are made from polymers which include hydroxypropylmethylcellulose and poly(vinyl acetate) (paragraph 56). The flake may also include lactose (paragraph 58). Among the drugs taught to be included in the flake is tamsulosin hydrochloride (paragraph 188). Enteric coatings are taught to protect the flakes until they reach the intestine (paragraph 41) or to provide extended release (paragraph 42). The amount of active is taught to range from 0.001% to about 100% of the flake (paragraph 13), where the amount should be in an "effective amount" based on the particular condition being treated (paragraph 311). Various routes of generic formation are taught (paragraphs 316-343).

Compton et al, while disclosing the various possible polymers and generic means to make the flakes, does not teach a flake comprising the specific polymers hydroxypropylmethylcellulose and poly(vinyl acetate) as a specifically disclosed composition.

The specific combination of features claimed is disclosed within the broad generic ranges taught by the reference but such "picking and choosing" within several variables does not necessarily give rise to anticipation. Corning Glass Works v. Sumitomo Elec., 868 F.2d 1251, 1262 (Fed. Circ. 1989). Where, as here, the reference does not provide any motivation to select this specific combination of variables, anticipation cannot be found.

That being said, however, it must be remembered that "[w]hen a patent simply arranges old elements with each performing the same function it had been known to perform and yields no more than one would expect from such an arrangement, the combination is obvious". KSR v. Teleflex, 127 S.Ct. 1727, 1740 (2007)(quoting Sakraida v. A.G. Pro, 425 U.S. 273, 282 (1976). "[W]hen the question is whether a patent claiming the combination of elements of prior art is obvious", the relevant question is "whether the improvement is more than the predictable use of prior art elements according to their established functions." (Id.). Addressing the issue of obviousness, the Supreme Court noted that the analysis under 35 USC 103 "need not seek out precise teachings directed to the specific subject matter of the challenged claim, for a court can take account of the inferences and creative steps that a person of ordinary skill in the art would employ." KSR v. Teleflex, 127 S.Ct. 1727, 1741 (2007). The Court emphasized that "[a] person of ordinary skill is... a person of ordinary creativity, not an automaton." Id. at 1742.

Consistent with this reasoning, it would have obvious to have selected hydroxypropylmethylcellulose and poly(vinyl acetate) from the list of potential polymers and the optional enteric coating from within a prior art disclosure, to arrive compositions "yielding no more than one would expect from such an arrangement". Here, the result would be an enteric coated flake used to administer an active agent.

Further, changes in result effective variables are not patentable where the difference involved is one of degree, not of kind; experimentation to find workable conditions generally involves the application of no more than routine skill in the art. See MPEP 2144.05. Here, where the prior art teaches the amount of active can vary greatly, routine experimentation would provide the correct amount of active, as taught in the prior art.
